Olmsted takes part in Kids' Yoga Day by Julie Dietrich, physical education teacher

Some students at W.A. Olmsted Elementary School celebrated the first annual international Kids' Yoga Day (KYD) on April 8. The special day was founded by Teresa Powers, a well-known kids yoga expert who has been practicing yoga for 30 years. She is the author of the best selling and award winning children's book "The ABC's of Yoga for Kids." The mission of the KYD is to show the world how just five minutes of yoga a day can go a long way to boost the mental and physical health and wellness of kids.

I learned about KY Day from a colleague and signed up to be an ambassador to receive free kids yoga supplies. Research

STEM club members introduced to nanotechnology

In April, the STEM club traveled to Albany to participate in the NanoCareer Day presented by SUNY Polytechnic Institute's Colleges of Nanoscale Science and Engineering.

More than 300 middle and high school students from throughout the region and

New York received a firsthand look at the exciting world of nanotechnology, while also participating in discussions on the numerous career opportunities it offers. The students visited a clean room and took part in activities showcasing the technology.

Gem, mineral and fossil show a hit

In April, the earth science class attended the 46th Annual Gem, Mineral, and Fossil Show in Johnson City.

The event is organized by the NY Southern Tier Geology Club and includes opportunities for students to see museum-quality specimens, fossils, crafts, and jewelry carved from minerals.

This year's show was packed with students, teachers and mineral and fossil enthusiasts. Pictured: Cassie Knickerbocker and Justyce Closs

Students took part in a scavenger hunt and were able to purchase items that will help them remember the experience for years to come.

Students excited as class rings arrive

On March 28, Robert Manganello of Herff Jones paid a visit to deliver rings to students in our Class of 2018. The students celebrated their new jewelry with pizza, chips, drinks and a long sleeve shirt compliments of Herff Jones. Pictured are the students who special ordered their Class of 2018 rings. - submitted by Nicole Cole, class advisor

Stage performance of 'To Kill a Mockingbird' offers thought-

In Harper Lee's "To Kill a Mockingbird," Atticus Finch tells his daughter, Scout, "if you can learn a simple trick, Scout, you'll get along a lot better with all kinds of folks. You never really understand a person until you consider things from his point of view, until you climb into his skin and walk around in it." (3.85-87)

Atticus' calm manner and sage advice is still relevant today. On March 17, approximately 65 students from the Harpursville ninth grade went to the Syracuse Stage to see a live production of "To Kill a Mockingbird," directed by Timothy Bond. Students studied the novel in the 8th grade curriculum and enjoyed seeing it brought to life. Hunter Sakowsky stated, "it shows our inner humanity in protecting people who can't protect themselves. For example, when Atticus protects Tom Robinson from the mob trying to lynch him. Another example is when Boo Radley protects Scout and Jem from Bob Ewell."

Great literature often makes us reflect upon our own world, and Sarah Peterson wrote, "this story really shows the struggles in everyday life between different races. Even today there is controversy about racism and unequal opportunities."

Chris Dattoria commented, "[The play] also helped me to think of what I would do in situations like the ones the characters [faced]."

Alayna Dudek wrote about the connection to our world today, noting, "There is a lot of racism in our generation. I think that [the play] brought people together and I think that it will have people who did judge people for their skin color... change their way of thinking and that they will do the right thing."

This is just what the Syracuse Stage attempts to do with the productions they choose. The theater's vision statement is to "illuminate the many truths of our common humanity through the transformative power of live theatre." Indeed, the theater's production struck such

provoking messages still relevant today

By Caroline Thomas, English teacher

a chord with many students. Alexis Roys stated, "The story had a very powerful message. The message was that everyone should have equal rights in the court of law and in everyday life." Morgan Fleming wrote, "they were clearly getting their point across on how we judge people before we actually meet them. Some [people] judge based on color and others judge based on rumors and stories."

Set in 1936 and published in 1960, "To Kill a Mockingbird" continues to speak to our students. Many also commented on other aspects of the field trip and production. Some noticed differences between the book and the play's narrator. Maryjane Kappauf mentioned, "I also enjoyed how there was a narrator who was an older version of Scout to help us understand what is going on." This was a technique to assist in moving the plot along faster for the stage production. Kailee Tyler said, "I really enjoyed how the actors connected with the audience," and Maddy Nealy wrote, "it clarified many parts of the book for me."

The students also enjoyed a more relaxed time together outside of the normal school schedule. Anthony Cole shared, "what I liked about the play was that it was something I never did before, and I got to do it with my friends." Many students enjoyed the surprises that come with live theatre, too. Brandon Hoover wrote, "my favorite part was when [Atticus] shot the blank out of the sheriff's rifle and everyone jumped."

The sound effects, lighting and music all enriched the live experience. The play ran from 10:30 a.m.-1 p.m. and students enjoyed packed lunches on the bus ride home. We are thankful for Kathy Harasta's assistance at BOCES in listing the Syracuse Stage as a performing arts center for the Arts-In-Education program. This enabled the field trip to be eligible for BOCES aid. There is no doubt the trip met the Arts-In-Education criteria "to enhance the regular curriculum and to integrate the New York State Learning Standards for the Arts." It definitely was an experience that the Class of 2019 will carry with them for a while.

"Yoga," from the cover suggests that yoga may help students relieve stress, calm anxiety and improve mood. Yoga can also improve physical health by increasing flexibility, strength, balance and fitness. You can read more about the benefits of yoga for kids in this article: www.health.usnews.com/wellness/articles/20160315/makingyogakidfriendly.

My prekindergarten through second-grade students enjoyed following along with Teresa's five-minute yoga video posted on YouTube. They were thrilled to know that they were celebrating KYD with 19 countries, 45 states and at least 23,000 people who had also signed up for the event. I plan to participate again next year and hope to get more students involved.

If you want more information on the event, visit the KYD website: www.kidsyogaday.com.
